

Topic: Cornell Method Date: 14-10-2024 Class: SE Section A Roll #: 009
Cue (Keywords, Questions) 1. Writing Techniques 2. Ignoring Advice 3. Consistency in Writing 4. Emotional Descriptiveness 5. Feedback Importance	Notes (Detailed Notes) 1. Writing Techniques • Try a few things, practice more, and see if you get better, if you don't try again. • Writing is really individual. • Tell the story the way you want to tell it. • Start by your instinct and think bigger and bigger. • Practice more and more and stick to your instinct. 2. Ignoring Advice • You have to learn when to ignore advice. (e.g., representing all the people giving you advice about your writing). 3. Consistency in Writing • Write consistently (work on your outline everyday). • Just keep on going; the goal is consistency. 4. Emotional Descriptiveness • Push yourself to write a lot but also learn to balance your life. • Try to be descriptive of your emotions, not proscriptive. 5. Feedback • Writing groups work for some people and not for others. • If writing groups work, it is one of the most useful tool. • Listen to the feedback and try to understand. • Give it some time and give it some space. • Be sure to say what is good.
Summary: (Summarize key concepts in a few sentences) It's important to find your own unique voice and style when writing science fiction and fantasy. Regular engagement and critique can help improve your writing skills. Balancing writing and other aspects of life is important, and writing groups can be beneficial for some writers. Remember to discover your strengths by focusing on interpreting your emotions.

