

1.0 MCQ's

- A) To bring food to her grandmother
- B) She acknowledged the others perspective while maintaining the own belief

1.1 Short Answer

- Little Red Riding Hood's relationship with her grandmother is described as caring and respectful
- The story suggests that wolves are, in every situation / tradition, considered evil

2.0 T/F / NG

- Not Given
- True

2.1 Paraphrasing Task

Little Red Riding Hood showed empathy towards the wolf's emotions while also understanding the need for personal independence.

3.0 Inference

The author criticizes the traditional fairy tales for their stereotypical characters. So Little Red Riding Hood is described more assertive as opposite to a typical heroine, and the wolf is so not straight-up evil.

3.1 Match the Headings

- A) Paragraph about the forest as a living entity
- B) Paragraph reimagining Little Red Hood as empowered
- C) Paragraph exploring the wolf's motivations

4.0 Evaluating Logic

The argument is well-supported, as Little Red Hood is portrayed with intelligence, for instance, instead of waiting for others to rescue her she confronts the wolf, which symbolizes a break from the traditional tropes.

4.1 Emotional Manipulation

The emotional appeals, such as the wolf's misunderstood nature and Little Red Riding Hood's growth are fair as they encourage the readers to question societal norms.

4.2 Figurative Language

as a metaphor

- The wolf, can be easily misunderstood by people and it bring out the theme of empathy, complexity
- The smile suggest strength and wisdom
- The personification highlights the forest's role as an observer.
